Mike Travis has been connected to the Design, Construction and Development industry for more than nineteen years. As an architect graduating from the University of Oklahoma, he helped to execute and manage over a billion dollars in projects with teams like RTKL, Perkins Will and Smallwood Reynolds Stewart Stewart. Mike's contributions to development, as the Director of Development for McChesney Capital, helped to bridge his knowledge in the design field to that of development and construction. Mike is a Vice President at J.M. Wilkerson Construction and is the leader of their Business Development department. His background in architecture, development and construction is critical to JMW's pre-construction efforts and new business pursuits. Mike is heavily involved with the City of Decatur as well as several charitable organizations such as the Alliance Children's Theater Guild and Woodruff Arts Center Families Center Stage. Other contributions include the Our House, Decatur Oyster Roast Co-Host, Quality Care for Children sponsor and Decatur Arts Festival volunteer.
